PORTLAND CITY COUNCIL · DISTRICT 3 — 3 SEATS · 21 CANDIDATES

Rank Angelita Morillo 1st, Tiffany Koyama Lane 2nd, Esther León 3rd.

Angelita Morillo

Renter, immigrant and former policy advocate at Partners for a Hunger-Free Oregon. Worked three years in Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty's office.

- Wrote Portland's ban on rent-setting software that lets landlords coordinate prices. Passed 8–2, Nov 2025.
- With Mitch Green, passed an impact fee on landlords who lease to immigration detention facilities. 9–2, Dec 2025.
- Voted no on moving $10M out of the police accountability office voters created. Failed 6–6, May 2026.
- Led the plan to restore 55 frontline city jobs. Tied 6–6; the mayor broke the tie against it, July 2026.

2,398 small-donor gifts, 95% of them $100 or less. 0 of 203 named donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives.

Endorsed by the Portland Mercury (#1 in District 3), Sierra Club, SEIU Oregon, Working Families Party, Basic Rights Oregon PAC and Portland DSA.

Critics say: Willamette Week ranks her fifth and calls her style divisive. Even the Mercury, which ranks her first, says she could pick her battles more carefully. Several of her budget proposals failed.

Tiffany Koyama Lane

Former Sunnyside Environmental School teacher and Portland Association of Teachers organizer. The council's first-ever vice president.

- Led Vision Zero work on traffic deaths, and co-sponsored dedicating 12.5% of the transportation utility fee to it, spring 2026.
- Updated the city's civil rights code to protect family structure, including nontraditional families. Passed 11–0, Mar 2026.
- Voted no on the $10M police-oversight cut, and restored 14 urban forestry jobs in the May 2026 budget.
- Voted no on the Blazers arena deal; says the city shouldn't pay unless the team's owners do.

"every traffic death is preventable"

2,509 small-donor gifts, 95% of them $100 or less. 0 of 269 named donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives.

Endorsed by the Portland Mercury (#2), Willamette Week (#2), Sierra Club, Portland Association of Teachers, SEIU Oregon and Basic Rights Oregon.

Critics say: A former aide filed complaints in February 2026 alleging retaliation; she declined to comment, citing personnel rules. The Mercury reports the city investigated and dismissed it. Several of her priorities failed on 6–6 votes.

Esther León

Doctor of physical therapy who works with people in Oregon prisons, and a community college teacher. Has lived in District 3 since 2020. First run for office.

- Wants Portland Street Response running 24/7 citywide.
- Backs social housing and a vacancy tax on corporate landlords, and prefers supportive housing to overnight-only shelters.
- Would revoke the ICE facility's permit and pause new AI data centers.
- On the Blazers arena: no clean-energy fund money, and a guaranteed return for the public.

"life doesn't have to be this way"

383 small-donor gifts, 98% of them $100 or less. 0 of 6 named donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives.

Endorsed by Sierra Club and Portland for All (#3 in District 3). The Mercury gives her an honorable mention.

Critics say: She has no political or civic experience. The Mercury called one idea, bringing back public payphones, "admirable but perhaps lofty." Portland Civic Lab notes her housing and utility plans don't list costs.

PORTLAND CITY COUNCIL · DISTRICT 4 3 SEATS · 12 CANDIDATES

Rank Mitch Green 1st, Jamey Evenstar 2nd, Jeremy Beausoleil Smith 3rd.

Mitch Green

Economist and Army veteran. Spent over a decade as an energy-economics analyst at the Bonneville Power Administration and taught at PSU.

- Co-sponsored "Keep Portland Housed": $17.5M to start a social housing loan fund and about $20.5M for eviction prevention, April 2026.
- Co-wrote the rent-setting software ban and the detention-facility impact fee with Morillo.
- Voted no on the $10M police-oversight cut. Failed 6–6.
- Pushed "Save Our Services" to keep 55 city jobs. It tied 6–6 and the mayor broke the tie against it; a smaller package saving about 30 jobs then passed.

"permanently affordable housing built for people, not portfolios"

2,533 small-donor gifts, 95% of them $100 or less. 0 of 227 named donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives.

Endorsed by the Portland Mercury (#1 in District 4), Sierra Club, SEIU Oregon, AFSCME, Portland Association of Teachers and Basic Rights Oregon PAC.

Critics say: He paid a $7,328 property tax installment late, after a reporter asked about it. He burned a brush pile during a burn ban in July and called it "a profoundly stupid thing to do." The police union called for him to resign over 2020–21 tweets; he declined. Billboards attacking him are funded through a Chamber-aligned committee; a complaint says the funding was hidden, which the Secretary of State is reviewing.

Jamey Evenstar

Ten years on City Hall staff, most recently chief of staff to Councilor Candace Avalos. Mother of five who rides transit every day.

- As policy director for Commissioner Chloe Eudaly, worked on tenant protections and the Rose Lane bus projects.
- Served on the team that set up Portland's new form of government.
- Wants a city housing fund and a housing impact fee on homes that aren't anyone's primary residence.
- Called the original Blazers arena deal "a terrible deal."

"I believe Portland can do hard things."

662 small-donor gifts, 95% of them $100 or less. 0 of 35 named donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives.

Endorsed by the Portland Mercury (#2 in District 4), Portland for All, Sierra Club, Street Trust Action Fund and Building Power for Communities of Color.

Critics say: Critics point to her years working for Eudaly and Avalos. A text from her Eudaly years, released through a records request, said neighborhood associations "get too much power and voice." Civic Lab found no stated position on hiring more officers or funding camp removals.

Jeremy Beausoleil Smith

Construction manager for capital projects at Portland State University and former project engineer. Democratic Party precinct committee person.

- Proposes a renters' bill of rights: no rent increases while code violations go unfixed, six months' notice, and a right to a lawyer in eviction.
- Wants Portland Street Response running 24/7 citywide, and an auditor's review of police overtime before more police money.
- Would pause new AI data centers and stop expansion of the riverside fuel-tank farm.
- Organized against a PGE project in Forest Park.

"I'll fight to lower costs and make life easier."

1,115 small-donor gifts, 98% of them $100 or less. 1 of 17 named donors also gave to Portland conservatives (Vasquez, Adams); none to Republicans.

Endorsed by Portland for All (#3 in District 4) and PSU's faculty union. The Mercury gives him an honorable mention.

Critics say: The Mercury says he'd face a learning curve. He dropped out of the 2024 council race. Civic Lab notes his plans don't name a funding source.

MULTNOMAH COUNTY CHAIR

1 SEAT · 3 CANDIDATES

Rank Shannon Singleton first.

Shannon Singleton

Social worker and sitting county commissioner (District 2). Led the nonprofit JOIN, was interim director of the Joint Office of Homeless Services, and was Gov. Kate Brown's housing advisor. Won her seat in 2024 over Sam Adams.

- Won a county eviction-prevention and legal-aid package in the 2025 budget, including eviction defense lawyers and courthouse legal help.
- Added money for lobbying transparency and fair housing investigations in East County (same budget).
- Got the stalled Walnut Park redevelopment in Albina moving.
- Convened the county's Eviction Prevention Table, Feb 2026.

"I want to serve where I can make the most change."

2 of 172 of Singleton's individual donors also gave to Republicans or Portland conservatives. Brim-Edwards: 202 of 489.

Endorsed by the Portland Mercury, Portland for All, Portland Association of Teachers, Working Families Party, Sierra Club and Basic Rights Oregon PAC.

Critics say: She has raised far less money than Brim-Edwards. She led the Joint Office of Homeless Services in 2022, and opponents may tie her to its record. SEIU Oregon endorsed both, ranking Brim-Edwards first.

Her opponents

Julia Brim-Edwards	41%	Voted for $101.6M in county money for the Blazers arena. 76 of her donors also gave to Republican campaigns. Basic Rights Oregon PAC withdrew its endorsement on Oct 6.

Sharon Meieran is also running. We don't make a recommendation on her. If you rank anyone after Singleton, rank only someone you'd want to win.

BEFORE YOU RANK ANYONE ELSE

The business-backed council candidates.

Kellie Torres · D3	42%	No record in office yet. Backed by the Chamber's committees and endorsed by Mayor Wilson.
Steve Novick · D3	25%	Sided with the business bloc on 52 of 79 split votes, including all 18 on homelessness, labor and housing. Co-sponsored the $10M police-oversight cut. Votes with progressives on officer masks and ID; the Mercury and Willamette Week endorse him.
Eric Zimmerman · D4	49%	Sided with the business bloc on 73 of 77 split votes. Voted yes on the $10M police-oversight cut.
Eli Arnold · D4	44%	No votes yet. Sitting Portland police officer; police staffing is his priority.
Olivia Clark · D4	33%	Sided with the business bloc on 74 of 77 split votes. Led the $10M police-oversight cut.

% = share of each candidate's named individual donors since 2023 who also gave to Republican campaigns or Portland conservatives (Gonzalez, Vasquez, Mozyrsky, Adams, Treece). Gifts of $100 or less are filed without names, so the check covers named donors only, for every candidate. Small-donor gifts of $100 or less: our picks 95–98%; Arnold 93%, Novick 84%, Clark 83%, Torres 82%, Zimmerman 78%.
